EDITORIAL

NIO one need quarrel with Marshal Sokolovsky's statement that the creation of a new currency, system in the three Western zones has "completed the disunion of Germany." That is lamentably true. But neither the currency reform nor any other actions of the Western Powers has caused that disunion. They are not the cause but its unavoidable consequence. The really decisive sleps in the whole evolution were taken in the first few months of the Allied occupationand by the Russians themselves. It was they who dropped between the East and West an "Iron Curtain" across which there has not-for now nearly three years -been any free movement either for persons or for goods. It is they who again and again have or such freedom of movement. It was they, who in flagrant breach of the provisions of the Poisdam agreement, carried out, in the first months, a series of sweeping economic changes in the Eastern zone without even discussing them with the Western allies. Whether the changes were goodor had is irrelevant. The point is they were carried out unilaterally, they effectively destroyed the economic unity of the country. and made impossible that common economic policy which the Potsthat initial Russian' breakaway, and of the continual insistence of the Russians on following in the Essiern sone an entirely separate out of any joint currency reform in the autumn of 1945.

But Whose Fault Is It?

for the whole of Germany. The crippling inflation which has grown up within Germany is largely the outcome of the wholesale flooding of the country with Russian occupation marks. The results have been disastrous. Without a controlled and stable currency all same economic and financial planning has been impossible. The vast discrepancy between the perred level of wages and prices and the amount of currency in circulation has produced a barter and black-market system which has played havon with all rational and all control. Thus the Western allies have been faced with an inescapable dilemma. Economic recovery was impossible without a drastic currency reform which would give the country a money in which sellers could have confidence, and a price-wage system having same refused to agree to the restoration | relation to the volume of cash in existence. The choice had to be made sooner or later, and there could be only once choice. Economic necessity had to outweigh political disability. Acceptance of the inevitability, of partition had to be preferred to nocopiance of the inevitability of collapse. The decision has been taken and with it the division of Germany becomes complete. Or rather, the fact of division is completely accepted. And the policy of the Western allies is at last based not on fiction but, on dam protocol had declared to be reality. When Marshal Sokoessential. Belgrade, June 29.—Yugoslavia's Communist Party angrily rejected tonight the Cominform charges against Premier Marshal Tito and his government. It said they were "based on fabrication" and were a "plain slander."

DEFENDED

In a formal statement the Party's Central Committee said Russia and other members of the Cominform had lodged a bill of complaint without hearing the opinion or any opposing arguments from Yugoslavia.

The Cominform—the Communist Information Bureau-accused Tito and other Yugoslav Communist leaders on Monday of pursuing a hateful policy toward Russia. It accused them of leaning toward the Western powers, conducting a "wrong" foreign and domestic policy and departing from the Marxist-Leninist line in favour of a policy of nationalistic independence.

Here is some further advice to foreign visitors on what to expect and What to do when in Britain.

The male approach is formal and casual, with the implied suggestion that it doesn't matter much either that one is sort of getting married because one does that sort of thing, and it's sort of good for one's health,"I mean.

Apart from these distinguishing marks, most of them are generous, hospitable, courageous, and courteous, good to their young, and de-proper fall into two categories. They voted to all animals except those marked down for slaughter.

Britons out of the middle drawer have a wider choice of marriageable women, and therefore demand a higher standard of beauty and intelligence. Although their, approach may be just as casual—a muttered word on a golf course of a take-it-or-leave-it proposal in a bar-they are frequently influenced by the film technique of love-making, so that the puzzled victim of this approach may often wonder if she is supposed to give an amateur performance of banker's daughter in a New York

THE British people are kind to · I foreigners, though not so kind as they are to dogs. It would not be an exaggeration to say that they prefer dogs.

Because Americans and the southern Irish speak English, they are not regarded as foreigners, however stoutly they may regard themselves as such.

PROBLEM FOR THE

REPUBLICANS:

HOUSE LOSE THE SENATE?

By Harry W. Frantz United Press Staff Correspondent

HE struggle for a majority in the United States Senate will have political importance second only to the choice of President in the national political campaigns already under way.

The possibility already looms that victory of either a Republican or Democratic Presidential candidate on November 2 may not be accompanied by the same party's control of the Senate.

There is in fact, a distinct uneasiness in some Republican political circles lest the party might gain the Presidency while losing the present small majority in the Senate. This would prolong the split between Congress and the Chief Executive that has marked the 80th Congress, and make more difficult the fulfilment of an effective foreign policy. -Ordinarily, returns for the House of Representatives give a majority to the same party that wins the Presidency. The 485 members of the House are all elected for two-year terms. But members of the Senate have a six-year term, and one-third lof 98 members of the upper Chamber are elected at two-year intervals, hence the popularity of a Presi-dential candidate does not affect a majority of Senate seats at any one

The hardest fights for Senate seats are expected to occur in Kansas, : Minnesota, Montana, New Jersey, New Mexico, Illinois, Colorado, Kentucky and Rhode Island

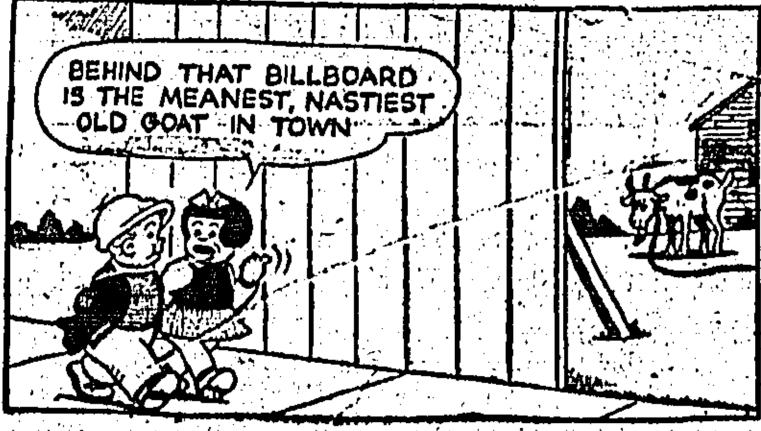

Among present members of the United States Senate, five already have withdrawn from the Senate race this year. They were Senators Wallace H. White, Republican, Maine, Senate majority floor leader, who has been ill; Senator Albert W. PROSPECTS

Senator Kenneth S. Wherry, Republican of Nebraska, majority whip in the upper chamber, is conceded a fair prospect of re-election. Long-term prospects also are regarded favourable for Senator Homer Ferguson, Republican, Michigan, leader of recent Senate investigating committees; Senator Leverett. Saltonstall, Republican, Massachusetts, former Governor of that state; and Senator Styles Bridges, Republican, New Hampshire, chief of the Senate Appropriations Committee. Of extraordinary international interest in November will be the results of Senatorial election in Minnesota where Senator Joseph H. Ball, Republican, will try to succeed himself. Ball, after appointment to the Senate to fill a vacancy in 1942, was re-elected in same year for a six-year term. He has been a powerful figure in labour legislation, and Senate debates on foreign policy. including the Marshall plan.

Now East shifted to the ten of diamonds. Declarer won with the queen, eashed the ace and king of spades, and overtook the eight of spades with dummy's jack.

At this point most declarers led the queen of hearts from dummy, .East covered with the king and South won. But now he had to lose two heart tricks.

There was nothing to be gained by the play of the queen of hearts. Declarer . should have eashed the rence, king and queen of spades and then the ace of hearts. I do not say that this play should be made because it drops the singleton king. but because there is nothing to be gained by leading the queen. If East had the king and one, declarer would have to lose a heart trick to the ten-spot in West's hand.

Bear in mind that when you have four to the queen-jack opposite four to the ace, the ace should be cashed. You lose nothing if the king does not drop.
